Reminder about Charterboat, Headboat, and Commercial Permits to Fish for Dolphin or Wahoo in the Atlantic Ocean

NOAA’s National Marine Fisheries Service (NOAA Fisheries Service) wants to remind fishermen there are several federal regulations regarding fishing for dolphin and wahoo in federal waters of the Atlantic Ocean (Maine through the east coast of Florida).

Summary of requirements

- Owners and operators of commercial vessels, charter vessels, and headboats are required to have a federal vessel permit to fish for or possess dolphin and wahoo in the Atlantic Ocean.
- The vessel operator must have an operator card on board the vessel along with one other form of personal identification that includes a picture (driver license, passport, etc.).
- Dealers must have permits to buy dolphin or wahoo from permitted fishermen.
- Recreational sale of dolphin and wahoo caught under the bag limit is prohibited unless the seller holds the necessary commercial permits.
- There is a commercial trip limit of 500 pounds for wahoo, and no commercial trip limit for dolphin.
- A commercially-permitted vessel fishing north of 39° N. latitude, that does not have a federal commercial vessel permit for dolphin or wahoo, may possess 200 pounds of dolphin and wahoo, combined.
- There is a recreational bag limit of 10 dolphin and 2 wahoo per person per day, with a limit of 60 dolphin per boat per day (headboats are excluded from the boat limit).
